Summer School "NanoBioTechnology and Management"

3.10.-6.10.2005 Evangelische Akademie Tutzing

For PhD students of CeNS, IDK NanoBioTechnology and ODEON Center for Entrepreneurship

Program Team:

Joachim Rädler, Christoph Bräuchle and Dietmar Harhoff,

Supported by CeNS and ODEON

Teams of science and management students participate actively in a three-day workshop in order to gain better understanding of the linkage between nanotechnology and management. Challenges and opportunities of NanoSciences will be the topic of key lectures given by scientists and top management. Classroom interactions and hands-on experience focus on entrepreneurial skills in starting and running technology-based start-up ventures. The workshop examines emerging markets, intellectual property issues and outline business plans on case studies. In addition it is planned to discuss the global entrepreneurial situations, risk and ethical issues associated with nanotechnology.

Applications for participation can soon be submitted by using the registration form on our website www.cens.de – Calendar (will be available on September12th). Registration will be closed on September 23th, 2005. Please register early, because the number of participants is limited.
